The Time to Fight the Left Is

Right Now

Republican victories in New Jersey and Virginia & Massachusetts are offering new signs of hope, conservatives across the country are gearing up for historic battles in the mid-term elections of 2010.

"The road forward is clear: we need to reclaim our conservative values." So says Michael Steele, chairman of the Republican National Committee, and author of a bold new book that attacks Obama's big-government agenda, and reaches out to town-hallers, tea partiers, independents, and anyone fed up with a federal government spiraling out of control.

In his brand new book, Right Now, Steele argues that the Left's agenda is dramatically out of step with Main Street America and with what the Founders of this country intended. The American people don't want socialized health care "reform," invasive "green" initiatives and burdensome new taxes, says Steele, and Republicans in Washington have to start listening.

Steele's new book presents a "12-step program for defeating the Obama agenda." And Step One, says Steele, is Admit we have a Problem, Then Admit our Mistakes: "Republicans gave in to big government, and we paid the price. It wasn't the fault of our ideals. It was the failure of our leaders to live up to them."

Instead, we must return to the principles of the Founders, principles of small government, economic freedom, lower taxes and renewed commitment to personal responsibility for oneself and one's family. Talking about it is not enough. It's up to conservatives and Republicans across the country to fight back—and the time is Right Now!

Newt Gingrich sums this wonderful fast paced read as follows:

"Michael Steele does a perfect job of raising this rallying Cry. This book doesn't just expose the Left's radical vision for America's future; it successfully contrasts it with an attractive alternative vision that respects the dignity of the individual over the convenience of the state. It should read by all our "fellow republicans" who want to participate in what Chairman Steele boldly calls the coming Republican Renaissance."
